

ABOUT THIS WORKSHOP

This workshop will help attendees understand the basic elements of the Export Administration Regulations and the various obligations for the export of military items that transitioned to a 600 series ECCN and how to make 600 series ECCN exports. Help your company avoid costly delays and mistakes by understanding when and if you need an EAR license or license exception to make an export.

Who should attend this important workshop? Export compliance administrators and managers at all levels (beginners to veterans), Empowered Officials and senior staff: all will gain a better understanding of the EAR, and how to make exports accordingly.

The program will include case studies, interactive discussions and exercises.

ABOUT THE PRESENTER

Jenny Hahn, President - Since joining FD Associates in 1992, Jenny has assisted exporters with a variety of licensing and compliance requirements. EAR BASICS
Focusing on 600 Series Exports

Advisors in Export Compliance and Licensing

September 26, 2018

Do you have items that transitioned to the EAR as a result of Export Control Reform? Do you understand the basic requirements of the EAR? Can you classify your product on the Commerce Control List? Do you know if your military or space parts are regulated under the EAR? More importantly, do you know test, inspection and production equipment, technology or software is subject to the EAR? Learn the answer to these questions by attending this important export control seminar explaining the Export Administration Regulations (EAR).

We will focus on the requirements of the EAR controls on exports of "dual use" commodities and technology, transferred military commodities, including how to determine Export Control Classifications Numbers and when a license is required. We will discuss EAR licensing requirements and license exceptions. With a focus on the 600 series and how to make exports of these items.

This is a small group workshop for export compliance specialists and licensing personnel. The program will be held in the Tyson's Corner, Virginia, at our offices. There will be classification exercises. Bring your scenarios and questions!
